EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

MONTEVALO,

FRIDAY MORNING, MARCH 3.

THE TERRITORIAL QUESTION.

No subject during the present session of Congress has so much excited the public mind, as the bill of Senator Douglas, to settle the vexatious question of Congressional intervention upon the subject of slavery in the Territories. This unusual interest, so manifestly demonstrated in the Southern country, is not at all surprising, when we reflect how much we have at stake. Involving as it does, the great Democratic principle of non-intervention, it is natural for us to watch its success with uncommon solicitude. The passage of Senator Douglass' bill under its amended form, will be the final establishment of the principles of non-intervention by Congress, and the regaining of that constitutional right taken from the South by the compromise of 1820.

It is then with feelings of surprise that we notice the disposition of certain Whig journals through the Southern country, to throw cold water upon this all important principle of Southern rights. Some, under pretence of a sacred reverence of the Missouri compromise (which has always been violently opposed by the South), others, under the conviction that the Nebraska and Kansas territories are valueless to the South (as slave labor can never be profitably expended there) would have us believe that this whole subject was nothing more than a bugbear, destined to bring about worse revulsions than we witnessed only a few years ago.

We do not consider it our place to observe with such strictness a compromise so unjust in its provisions, and one, too, so often violated by its framers and advocates when their purposes could be effected. It was a free soil measure at first, and should never have been countenanced by the Southern people, much less be brought up as a reason for opposition to the Nebraska bill. It is a matter of record that the men most conspicuous for the adoption of the Missouri compromise were the very first to disclaim the extension of the line 36° 30' to the Pacific Ocean, if then it is so palpable that its framers only observed it, when it was their interest to do so, we see no necessity for our observing it at all.

As for the second objection—that it will be of no advantage to the South if the bill is passed, we answer that it is not to the point at issue to calculate whether Nebraska and Kansas will be free or slave states. The bill says nothing about this. It only wishes to leave to the people of the respective territories, whether slavery shall exist within their limits; when admitted as a State or not,—or in other words, to take it from Congress to those more immediately interested in it. There cannot be one single constitutional objection to this, and its adoption will tend more to the preservation of the Union than anything else.

Too long and too much has the subject of slavery been agitated in the Congress of the United States, and we cannot too soon remove it. It has been the cause of more strife, sectional feeling, and vituperation than all the political differences human flesh was ever heir to.

Mr. Douglass deserves the warmest thanks of the Southern people, for the very able and decided stand he has taken upon this subject, and will no doubt reap his reward at their hands. He even now stands forth as a prominent candidate for the next Presidency.

By to-day's mail we learn that there has been an advance on Cotton.

Owing to the sickness of Judge Shortridge, there was no court held at Elton, Jefferson county, this week.

On Friday night the 24th inst., the Steamers Sam Dale and Ambassador were entirely destroyed by fire, while they were lying at the wharf in Mobile.

Both of the boats were insured, partly by the Mobile insurance offices, the remainder by the Western offices. As they were on the point of leaving for the up-country, a large amount of freight was lost. The iron safe and papers of the Ambassador were saved, but nothing on board the Dale was saved, the destruction was so rapid.

Several other steamers were damaged, and had it not been for the active measures of their chief officers they would have probably shared the fate of the Dale and Ambassador. We have not heard of any lives lost which is the only fortunate circumstance connected with the sad affair.

Editorial Miscellany.

GOOD IDEA.—The Scientific American proposes as an improvement for the benefit of railway travellers, to have a broad board inside of and at the end of each carriage, on which will be painted the names of stations, &c., in order of arrival—these names to be covered with slides so arranged that on approaching each place its name could be uncovered, and thus announce quietly and certainly without confusion. It would also facilitate the conveniences of travellers and save the conductors breath and temper, and the same slide should exhibit the amount of time allowed for stoppage at each place.

REJECTED.—The nomination of George Saunders, consul to London, was rejected in the Senate on Tuesday, by a large vote.

ELECTED.—G. A. Pearce, on the 14th inst., was elected by the Legislature of Maryland U. S. Senator from that State.

OPPOSED.—Senator Houston is the only Senator who voted against the confirmation of Gen. Gadsden as Minister to Mexico. He is also opposed to the Nebraska bill.

OPPOSED TO IT.—The House on the 17th refused to concur in the joint resolutions of the Senate proposing amendments to the constitution, striking out so much as refers to the election by the people, of the Secretary of State, Treasurer, Comptroller, Judges of the Supreme court and Chancellors, Attorney General, and Solicitors, leaving nothing but the proposition to submit the question of biennial elections and Annual Sessions of the Legislature.

ADJOURNED.—The Legislature of Georgia adjourned on the 10th inst. It will be left to a vote of the people, whether the Capitol be removed to Macon or not.
